

NUTTIN' BUT

Stringz

Brothers, Tourie and Damien Escobar, better know as Nuttin' But Stringz (NBS), combine the classical sound of the violin with Pop, R&B, and Hip-hop. The result is a unique and uplifting fury of modern emotion and harmony... intensity and rhythm. They both attended the legendary Juilliard School of Music in New York City where they were able to hone their craft and find their place. Their mission is to bridge the gap between Popular and Classical music. Their debut CD, Struggle from the Subway to the Charts, was released through KOCH Entertainment in October 2006 on NBS Entertainment Inc. / KOCH Entertainment. NBS has been playing the violin for over 15 years and at the tender ages of 7 and 8, they knew what inspired them. They were relentless and played the New York City subways for pocket change. The subway was the gateway that landed NBS a manager and a record deal. In 2005, they entered a local talent contest at the legendary Apollo Theatre and won! As a result of the media attention surrounding the event, they have appeared on The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, Ellen DeGeneres, Late Late Show with Craig Ferguson, The Today Show with Katie Couric and have even been featured in Major Motion Pictures such as "STEP UP". NBS brilliantly molds unlikely genres with ease. From 50 Cent to Vivaldi, from DMX and R Kelly to Bach, NBS continues to enlighten and entertain audiences of all ages. From toddlers to teens and beyond... their music crosses and opens age barriers in a way that is unforgettable. Struggle from the Subway to the Charts is a brilliant blend of classical daring intertwined with rap undertones. NBS has created a new genre that's being talked about and admired. The buzz has begun. Their music is a provocative and stirring thunder that will be analyzed and copied for years to come.
